Today is Wednesday April 1, 2020

Are You Doing Everything You Can for Your Remote Workforce?

If the answer is "no," or "I have no idea," it is time for you to tune into this special Side Affects podcast: Your Working from Home Survival Kit. For those that have claimed, "My team can NEVER work from home," well, that argument has been altered, hasn't it? Thrown into unique working conditions, for the COVID-19 health concern, and being forced to adapt, for who knows how long, can certainly test your business' future. Lindsey Pollack joins remotely with Side Affects hosts, Kenzie and Scott, to share some key ingredients that help your workforce adjust in this time of crisis. Some key takeaway words, Agility, Gratitude, Patience, Trust, Clarity and Boundaries. Listen in as Lindsey relates to multiple generations and their approach going forward.

Grocery Store and Gas Pumping: Social Distancing is Key

Here's a little something to share with your employees. We have friends at Midmark Medical, and this video was shared with their team- specifically how to be safe when grocery shopping and getting gas at the pumps. Dr. Tom shares that the number one risk is people. You must be aware of your surroundings and maintain the six feet distancing. It is wise to wipe down the carts, the touch screens, and continually wipe hands, and try not to touch your face. But again the highest contaminate is people around you. (Be careful with your sound volume, the wind is prominent at the end of this video.)
