CDC RECOMMENDATIONS FOR AFTER COVID-19 ISOLATION

Two different articles from the CDC with recommendations and the steps going forward with employees that have contracted COVID-19 or been exposed to someone who has. One is specific for HR administrators, and the other is to share with employees. The details are the same, with the most important one...that none of these steps should supersede the employee's doctor's recommendation.

JOYAGES: VIRTUAL ESCAPES

"Finding the Benefit to Your Biggest Stress"

Everyone suffers from stress in their own way. This exercise helps us identify our stress and reminds us that we determine if it will be a bad or good impact. This pandemic has 'inconvenienced' us on so many levels. We might see silver linings along the way. For example, I work from home, so I get to be with my family. Now this can be a good or bad. I work from home, but WOW, I am with my family. We have the control of how this stress will affect us. Take a minute to click and reflect.

MB COVID-19 RESOURCE CENTER

Once again, COVID-19 has required us to think outside the office space, and yet, we are still at work. So, below is a letter template for Anti-Harassment notification while working remotely. This is created by an attorney, however it is just a template. If you have any questions, please contact your attorney for further details on your workforce conditions.
